TEACHING INCLUSION AWARENESS IN SCHOOLS

This inclusion awareness program is delivered over two weeks (2 x 40 - 60 min sessions).

Facilitator, Prue McCarthy, is a woman with lived experience of disability.

School students work through a colourful book with activities and games. They hear directly from a facilitator with lived experience of disability, allowing them greater opportunity for perspective and understanding.

Designed for 8-11 year olds, students complete activities giving them the chance to experience what it might be like to have a disability, and the opportunity to ask the questions they have always wanted to know.

This free program can be adjusted to cater for school aged children K-Y6.

"I wanted children to realise that people with a disability are just the same as everyone else's and I hope they can carry this awareness with them through to their adult years and onto the next generation. The best place to make change into the future is with the children of today."
